The seven women in the Bay St. Louis, Mississippi grief support group have been meeting for four years in an effort to comfort each other. Now, tired of grieving and feeling sorry for themselves, some are ready to get on with their lives and look for new love. Even the woman in the throes of menopause who vows at first to stay single, and the 90ish member who has lost three husbands join the fishing party. That's when the trolling and fun begin. In spite of their hilarious, inept attempts at finding love, they are successful in landing their catches, the good as well as the bad. Now what do they do with them? Do they throw them back in or are they keepers? Are they really ready to let go of their former loves? Go fishing with these strong Southern women and catch a good laugh.
